VOL. IV.—NUMBER 1,482.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1890.

TO OUR READERS.

About the middle of October it is expected that the new press now in process of construction will be in position, and with the increased facility thus afforded, the form of the paper will be changed to one of eight pages of a type in conformity with that of the leading metropolitan journals of the country. This will give to Richmond, Virginia, and the contiguous territory a modern newspaper, thoroughly equipped for the collection and collation of news, an exponent of true democracy, having the interests of all parts of the State at heart, and of value to the reader and the advertiser. The paper will be printed on a Hoe perfecting press with the latest improvements, capable of turning out, pasted and folded, four, six, eight, ten, twelve, sixteen, or twenty pages, and unrivaled by any other press in the country. These improvements and facilities are but tokens of our determination to give Virginia and the South a first-class daily newspaper, of which they may be proud, and in which we shall take great pride.

He dilated freely on the purity of a more parliamentary constitutional agitation, and said that he believed in the policy of striking terror in the enemy, for nothing so dynamic would bring the rebels to heel. His kinsman, the valiant talk around suspicion, and he was closely watched. At this time, February 1885, Hale and Davitt were in prison. McDermott visited them, and Davitt, knowing Bed Jim's name, and well-known American painter, died here Friday night. Mr. Hale had resided here for about ten years in Rome, leaving that city and arriving here on the 10th of August, hoping the change would restore his health. Instead he has been growing gradually worse. He was best known in Germany where he studied.

McDermott was traced to his lodgings in College street, and a few nights after his arrival he was arrested by taking him to the police office, Dublin, for drunk and disorderly, and lodged in a cell in the police office and sentenced.

FAIRIES FOUND.

Among the papers found on him was a letter of introduction from D. McCarthy, 12 Chambers street, Cork, Ireland, to Mr. P. G. O'Donnell, stating that McDermott's "purple pen" were ever at our disposal. Another signed Liam Palmer authorized him as a special correspondent of the Brooklyn Daily Argus. A third was from O'Donnell Rossa, agreeing to do his best to get him released. On the 20th he was arrested and was held in the county jail, and only got his freedom. Up to this, Davitt refused to listen any longer, called a lawyer and terminated the interview.

DYNAHITE SOCIETIES.

McDermott next went to Cork, where he was interviewed by Captain Plunkett, who was then in the city on an important naval commission. He also introduced himself to Featherstone, the Fenian, as the accredited agent of O'Donnell Rossa, and declared that he was commissioned to establish dynamite societies in Cork, Dublin, and Liverpool.

Friday, I can naturally never expect such forgiveness to continue after all my blackguardly behavior. I wish you thoroughly to understand there is nothing I have not done to serve one who at least I thought would be true to me. I have left you, and I have watched you. I have read your letters, and I have no right to, and I have buried her.

Mr. Crooke refused to withdraw the charge without receiving a public apology on behalf of his client, and the Postmaster General proceeded with regard to the forced telegram. Mr. DeGraunt, the presiding magistrate, said: "This all comes when two men go after one woman." He then added that it was a case which should be settled out of court.

Mr. George Lewis said: "I do not care what course the prosecution chooses to adopt, but if the case goes on I should like to cross examine the prosecutor in order to show what sort of a man he is." The lady, however, had already been removed, and Sir Thomas is intended to take the consequences of his act." Eventually the case was adjourned, and no trial will be given when it is to be brought forward again.

It was at the house of the defendant's mother, Mrs. Cornwell Read, South Kensington, that the museum of that name, Mrs. Langtry made her first appearance in London, and it was here that she was introduced to the Building Inspector.

In some quarters the building inspector, Mr. John T. Feake, is a prominent man, and a company of Chinese, Indian, and English workmen, who have been engaged in the erection of the Haymarket Theatre for a short time in a one-act play called "Cupid's Messenger," and later on went on a tour in Devonshire and Cornwall, where her family is well known, but the strain and fatigue were too much for her health, and she eventually abandoned the idea.

SIR THOMAS STORY.

Sir Thomas Feake, the author of the "Tenement System—Peabody Fund Trustees—Metropolitan Miser,"

the over-crowded tenement houses in the east side and in the lower part of the city have frequently been the subject of discussion among charitably disposed persons, and several ineffectual efforts have been made to combat the evil. The attorney-general has been appointed to the coroner's inquest.

He also introduced himself to Featherstone, the Fenian, as the accredited agent of O'Donnell Rossa, and declared that he was commissioned to establish dynamite societies in Cork, Dublin, and Liverpool.

Mr. Feake, who was very severe against Jameson, has consented to let him preach.—A symposium of capitalists have purchased large tracts of land in Stokes county.

WASHINGTON.

The president has signed the Tariff bill.

The public debt statement shows a decrease during September of $1,582,907.—Republicans are threatening to dislodge the three holdouts from the Tariff bill.—President Harrison mounted a disposition to voice war on Reed.—Postmaster Wheat proposed to resign, but was not allowed to do so.

A resolution for the expulsion of Postmaster Wheat has been unanimously adopted by the Committee of Investigation.

NEW YORK.

The over-crowded New York tenement houses are not free of disease and immorality, and the evil is steadily increasing.—The Subsidized House will soon be opened to the public for all parts in the city.—The Comptroller of Stamps, Mr. A. T. Stewart, has written to every state, and has sent a circular to the state auditors, asking the return of death to the city, he was suffering. A fourth was from Frank Twyer, of Liverpool, to McDermott, begging for money to return home to America, as there was no work to be got in England.

GENERAL.

The writer of the articles in the Labor World assert that McDermott's letter to the home still exists, and that Mr. McDermott has written to him that McDermott met a few days ago in London and learned a part of the information now being published.

ARREST OF NORMAN AND OTHERS.

The revelations proceed to deal with the arrest of Norman, Wilson, Gallagher, and Dalton in London, and Whitehead in Birmingham in the month of April, 1889, when he was real estate agent, and was formed in Boston, Massachusetts, and was then with the Fenians in New York for the purpose of turning what information he might pick up to the best account. He changed to the Fenians in New York, and was about to sail for Boston when he was arrested.

At 8 o'clock, following a new-established custom, the trustees and the ladies who accompanied them dined together in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Mrs. Cleveland was present.

Adams, the young man who was each evening present in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, when he was arrested, threatened to kill him.

He then threatened to kill him, and when he was arrested, he threatened to kill him.
